DIALOGUE

by TIM BASS

GENRE: Drama

SYNOPSIS: Two strangers meet at a train station and confront hard questions about God's presence.

DIRECTOR'S TIP: Dialogue portrays the Christian who comes on too strong with his evangelism methods, we see an unbeliever using "strong-arm tactics" to get his point across. This reversal of roles can be a great opportunity to develop strong choices in your characters. John, for example, seems to be a take-charge sort of guy, but doesn't necessarily need to be unpleasantly so—perhaps play with the dynamic of a high-pressure used car salesman who keeps changing tactics to keep his "customer" vulnerable. Frank, on the other hand, doesn't have to be weak to be effective; his efforts to politely answer John's questions in the face of such an overwhelming barrage of opinions should provide plenty of natural conflict without having to overdo it.

DIALOGUE by Tim Bass

Lights up on FRANK. He is a middle-aged man, carrying a briefcase. He appears to be waiting for a bus or a train. He is looking through his Bible as he waits. He checks his watch. JOHN walks up. He checks his watch and glances over at FRANK.

JOHN: Book of the Month Club?

FRANK: Um...sorry?

JOHN: Nothing. You were reading your book there; I was being ironic.

FRANK: Oh. It's, it's not just a book. It's, uh, it's the Bible .

JOHN: I know. Thus the irony. "Book-of-the-Month Club."

FRANK: Right. Okay.

JOHN: Train's late.

FRANK: Yes, it is.

JOHN: So, what...you a religious man? Or you just like a good laugh in the morning?

FRANK: Whaddaya mean?

JOHN: Just wondering if you are a religious man or if you just enjoy a little chuckle on the way to work, reading about talking snakes and prophets coming back from the dead. Sounds like the beginning of a great joke or maybe a Stephen King novel.

FRANK: Actually, I'm a Christian.

JOHN: Christian, right. So, what, you like buy the whole seven-day theory? What a crock. Life as a whole is not here through divine decree, my friend, but through some kind of accident. Life is a kind of fluke that emerged from the laws of nature. No reason. Just the way nature works.

FRANK: Well, the Bible says...

JOHN: Come on. Please. "The Bible says." I would love to believe in some higher power that's out there and who cares for humanity, or for me personally. Would love to think there's someone I can run to when I'm scared to death or in trouble. Can't do it. Especially after all the horrible things that happen to people every day. God, right. I equate nature with God. I mean, if there is a God, I think he's a very remote God. Maybe he created us, but at this point, we're on our own. Nature is God. I mean, if we destroy ourselves tomorrow, the birds will still be singing in the trees. Totally oblivious to all this human tragedy.
